There is something very wrong with the system of values in a society that has only derogatory terms like nerd and geek for the intellectually curious and academically serious.

A geek, according to Webster’s New World Dictionary, is a street performer who shocks the public by biting off heads of live chickens. It is a telling fact about our language and our culture that someone dedicated to pursuit of knowledge is compared to a freak biting the head off a live chicken.

Even at a prestigious academic institution like Harvard, anti-intellectualism is rampant. Many students are ashamed to admit, even to their friends, how much they study. Although most students try to keep up their grades, there is a minority of undergraduates for whom pursuing knowledge is the top priority during their years at Harvard. Nerd is ostracized while athletes are idolized.

The same thing happens in U.S. elementary and high schools. Children who prefer to read books rather than play football, prefer to build model airplanes rather than get wasted at parties with their classmates, become social outcasts. Ostracized for their intelligence and refusal to conform to society’s anti-intellectual values, many are deprived of a chance to learn adequate social skills and acquire good communication tools.

Enough is enough. Nerd and geeks must stop being ashamed of who they are. It is high time to face the persecutors who haunt the bright kid with thick glasses from kindergarten to the grave. For America’s sake, the anti-intellectual values that pervade our society must be fought.

There are very few countries in the world where anti-intellectualism runs as high as in popular culture as it does in the U.S. In most industrialized nations, not least of all our economic rivals in East Asia, a kid who studies hard is lauded and held up as an example to other students.

In many parts of the world, university professorships are the most prestigious and materially rewarding positions. But not in America, where average professional ballplayers are much more respected and better paid than faculty members of the best universities.

How can a country where typical parents are ashamed of their daughter studying mathematics instead of going dancing, or of their son reading Weber while his friends play baseball, be expected to compete in the technology race with Japan or remain a leading political and cultural force in Europe? How long can America remain a world-class power if we constantly emphasize social skills and physical prowess over academic achievement and intellectual ability?
America Needs Its Nerds. Leonid Fridman's general argument in his work America Needs Its Nerds is that...
Read this essay on America Needs Its Nerds. and shit their values before America falls apart, and for geeks and nerds to accept and stop being ashamed of.

America Needs Its Nerds by Leonid Fridman. At the beginning of his essay, and how nerds are viewed in America.

America Needs Its Nerds - Leonid Fridman. America remain a world-class power if we constantly emphasize social skills and physical prowess over academic.

The Two Sides of a Mind. Search. Needs Its Nerds Style Analysis This is a timed essay over America Needs Its Nerds by Leonid. America Needs Its Nerds

Continuing Review Focus: The Academic. students were asked to analyze how Leonid Fridman develops his argument that America Needs its Nerds. . ESSAY STRUCTURE.

America Needs Its Nerds by Leonid. 0 Comments ANALYSIS Essay. Fridman shows that America cannot sustain world-class power without a change emphasis on.